A RAILWAY STRIKE?

By a majority award the Board of Conciliation pro-posed restoring to Canadian Railwaymen the balance of the fifteen percent reduction taken off-some years asy after the de-pression struck. Five per cent was restored some time ago and the men now desire the remaining ten per cent restored at once regardless of earnings or the ability of the railways to meet their demands out of earnings, contending that when the initial cut was made something was taken away which rightfully and legally belonged to the men.

The Railways, while not opposing the restoration of the cut, object to the method of restoration and contend that the the ten per cent cut should be restored according as earnings warranted it on a certain definite schedule, named in the findings. of the majority of the Board.

It now transpires that a vote is being taken of all the railway employees in the whole Dominion on a strike ballot, and the possibility of a lock-out is not so remote as some think. Sevenme possibility of a lock-out is not so remote as some think. Seven-teen Unions are involved and the decision imminent. If the men-vote to strike, as is likely, will the Governments and the C. P. R. capitulate? If they do not give in to the demands of the men-a strike is, almost certain, and the repercussions will be felt throughout the length and breadth of the country.

Very little has been published concerning the whole mat-ter in the daily press, with the result that the public may wake up some of these mornings without any railway services of any kind. And then what a hulla-ballo!

Regardless of the merits of the dispute, of which we know practically nothing and assuming the report to be true in all it's aspects, there can be but little justification for the Union leaders notifying the Board in advance of the hearings, that the Unions would not recognize any award of the Board of Conciliation based upon gross receipts. That sounds like impudence of this novest kind. the worst kind.

Incidentally we imagine there are many business mer and others in practically every walk of life. In Western Canada particularly, who sincerely wish that their income were anywhere near ninty per cent of what it was in the palmy days of 1929 and before, and who likewise are very grateful for the fact that living is not as expensive as it was then, otherwise their plight would in-

SCOTLAND

"Scotland" is the name given in modern times to that portion of Great Britain which lies North of the English Boundary. In former times it was called North Britain, and even today letters rrom certain parts of the world, notably from England, are addressed for example: "Edinburgh, N. B." the letters N. B., of course, standing for North Britain

The area covered by what is now called Scotland or Northern Britain was once named "Caledonia" and that poetic term is still used to some extent, but more particularily when applied to a native son

We hope our readers who may happen to be proud of the land of their birth, if it should happen to be that of Scotland. will forgive us if we, perhaps- cause them a shock by propounding the following query and supplying the answer: How did Scotland get it's name?

They say that the baggines came from Ireland. They say that the bagplipes camie from Ireland. This te true Caledonian will deny with spirit even though unsupported with actual knowledge. Doubts are cast on the origin of golf by the foreigner to the claim of the Scots that "gour" originated there. Another possible illusion was dispelled when an authority on the subject claimed that "curling" originated in France.

To rob Scotland of the credit for these may be bad enough but what will the sons of Scotland say when they must give credit to Ireland for her name? Yet it seems to be true. The name originated in the III centure when a tribe of Scots.

give credit to Ireland for her name? Yet it seems to be true. The name originated in the 11th century when a ribe of Scotie originally from what is now called "Ireland", settled in the southern part of Scotiland, from which it derived either the name of "Scotia" of Scotisland" and thence in the 12th and 13th century to "Scotiand," since when the name has been firmly established.

However, if it is any consolation, and fair exchange seeming to be no robbery, it also seems that Ireland was once called "Scotia". but that is another story.

ROOSEVELT AND THE SUPREME COURT

For a man of such direct inclinations President Roos evelt seems to have departed from his usual habit of downright forthrightness in his proposed method of getting over the difficulties created by the supreme Court to his programme.

. The Supreme Court of the U. S. is supposed to be above politics and out of the game. It has been the curse of all Courts where the appointees hold office at the will on a political party, and it is admittedly the curse of the low-cr courts of the U. S. where political considerations prevail The proposed remedy might in the long run prove worse than the disease.
